THE LEGEND OF THE SNOWDROP

When God created everything there is on earth, he coloured them beautifully.

He told the snow: "You have to find your colour on your own."

The snow went to the grass: "Please give me some of your emerald-green!"

But the grass refused. And the snow met with the same rejection from the red poppy, from the blue bluebell, and from the yellow sunflower.

THE LEGEND OF THE SNOWDROP

Sad and bitter, the snow got to the snowdrop. "No flower wanted to share their colours with me... They all told me to go away..."

The snowdrop whispered: "If you like my colour, I will gladly share it with you!"

Ever since, the snow has been wearing white clothes, just like the snowdrop. And, to show her gratitude, the snow allows the snowdrop to come out before all the other flowers!

The legend says that, in the mountains that sheltered the Great God of the Geto-Dacians, Zamolxis, there once lived a priest whose hair was white as snow. He had a hut at the entrance of a cave, and he fed on berries and drank water from springs.

He also learnt the languages that animals "spoke", and he got along with wolves best. The packs of wolves would come to his hut when feeling hungry, and the priest was their leader in their hunting trips, teaching the wolves to choose as their prey only sick or very old animals.

Seeing the priest's influence on animals and on wolves in particular, the Great God Zamolxis summoned the priest and told him that hard times were ahead and he would need the priest to obey him and follow his destiny.

The God said: "I will turn you into a wolf, but not into an ordinary one. Your hair is white as snow, which shows your deep insight; your arm is strong, which shows your power. I will grant you with becoming immortal and you shall be the Great White Wolf, the leader of the Geto-Dacians both in battles and at peace."

Since then, the Dacians won a lot of battles, with the Great White Wolf helping the brave soldiers along the way. Even the flag they used in battles represented the head of a wolf and the body of a dragon!

*

One summer, as he was watching the night sky, the God Zamolxis asked the Great White Wolf: "Tell me, do you think I should turn you into a human again?" The Wolf answered: "My thoughts only go to the greater good of the entire people of the Dacians. The destiny of Dacia and the happiness of the entire people are above my wishes." "Then so be it!" said Zamolxis.

But as the time went by, the Dacians would lose their belief in their gods. They also started wandering around the woods to kill wolves. This upset Zamolxis, who summoned all the wolves and ordered them not to help the Dacians anymore. He also forbade the Great Wolf to lead them in their battles against the Romans.

Brave as they were, without the Wolf's help, the Dacians lost their battles against the Romans. Zamolxis and the Great Wolf went for their retreat to the Sacred Triangle in the Hidden Mountain, next to the Stone of the Geto-Dacians, where they are said to be still waiting for a time when the Dacians will return to their beliefs.

Boli influen ate de factorii de mediu i propriul comportament Ambrozia

In legendă se spune despre ea că este o buruiană urâtă cu semin e amare pe care nu o place nicio vie uitoare

Ambrozia este o plantă adusă din America de Nord i de Sud Este o plantă care se răspândește repede cu ajutorul vântului, produce multe semințe, nu este pretențioasă și ia locul plantelor de acolo care dispar, deci distruge mediul. Nici animalele nu o pot mânca.

Pentru oameni este toxică, alergenă. Oamenii strănută, lăcrimează, nu pot respira sau chiar fac șoc anafilactic. Deci ea este un factor de mediu dăunător.
